DEHYDRATION: DEADLY TO GOATS

~Suzanne W. Gasparotto

Goat producers sometimes don't recognize how sick a goat will become when it lacks sufficient water in its body. A dehydrated goat can and will die. Even a partially dehydrated goat often requires human assistance to survive. The rumen must be about 70% water to function properly.

Wide swings in outside temperatures make it difficult for a goat to control its internal body temperature; this is especially true of young kids. Life-threatening dehydration often occurs. Dehydration is not just a hot-weather issue. Think of how thirsty you are in cold weather. Adult or kid, a goat cannot survive long without adequate fluid levels in its body.

Nearly every illness or injury to a goat involves some level of dehydration. A good indicator of dehydration is lack of urination. (Note: A goat that is straining to urinate has a different problem. Refer to my article on Urinary Calculi on the Articles page of the Onion Creek Ranch website at www.tennesseeemeatgoats.com.)

Both diarrhea and fever remove large amounts of liquids from the goat's body. Anytime a goat is off-water and/or off-feed, dehydration is imminent. Sub-normal body temperature, which is either an indication of rumen-related problems or that the goat's bodily functions are shutting down and death is near, goes hand in hand with dehydration. Shock, toxicity, and infection all involve dehydration. If you don't rehydrate the goat, no amount of medication will save it.

Originators of Tennessee Meat Goats™

Diarrhea in both adults and kids is a symptom of illness rather than an illness itself. Something is wrong that is causing the diarrhea. You must determine the cause of the diarrhea before trying to stop it. Sometimes diarrhea is beneficial (aiding in the elimination of toxicity), but it always requires rehydration. See my article on Diarrhea on the Articles page of www.tennesseeemeatgoats.com.

You cannot adequately rehydrate a goat, adult or kid, by using a syringe filled with fluid. A 60 cc syringe is only two ounces and is too cumbersome to dribble liquid into the goat's mouth. Both the goat and you are going to stress out before a beneficial amount of fluid has been delivered via syringe. The less the goat is handled, the better for both of you. A 100-pound goat needs a gallon of liquid a day to maintain hydration. One gallon is 3,840 cc's. The only reasonable delivery method of this much liquid is a stomach

FROM THE FARM...

It is hard to believe the long days of summer are nearly gone and fall is about to begin. Fall is always an exciting time of year as many breeders are showing their Myotonics at MGR sanctioned shows and county fairs. I have had the pleasure of seeing several MGR youth members on Facebook showing off their ribbons and prizes. It is amazing that just a few years ago many county fairs would not let Myotonics participate and now we see them participating and doing exceptionally well in the market place. Fall is always my favorite time of year as I plan my breeding. I know many breeders are getting ready to breed. Now is an excellent time to make sure your goats are up-to date on vaccinations, worming and to trim feet. Often, these things do not get done before winter and then sickness and foot issues arise. As we all know from experience no one wants to go out and doctor a sick goat in the snow! Nationals and MGR's third Judges training program is just around the corner. The event will be held in conjunction with International Goat Days in Millington, TN. The dates for are September 11 -13, 2014. I am expecting our National show to be the largest to date as many beautiful goats have earned their third point this show season.

We have an estimated sixty-five Myotonic goats qualified for the National show and the possibility of several more qualifying. If you have been looking for new goats to add to your herd then don't miss International Goat Days as private treaty sales will be allowed. All guarantees will be between the buyer and the seller. Please remember all goats on the grounds must be entered in at least one MGR show and have a health certificate listing International Goat Days as your destination.

The processing of paperwork has remained very smooth over the last few months. Generally, once received most paperwork is being issued within two business days. If you have registrations that need to be processed please get these into MGR soon. Paperwork that is left unprocessed tends to become overwhelming fast! MGR is always here to help! If you have paperwork questions or show questions please contact us. The fastest way to reach MGR is by e-mail. Please use this address: MyotonicGoatRegistry@yahoo.com

I hope to see many of you at International Goat Days! ~Tara

THE GOURMET GOAT: GOAT CHEESE PITA BREAD PIZZAS

Ingredients:

11 ounces goat cheese
 7-ounce jar roasted red peppers
 1 cup chopped sun-dried tomatoes marinated in olive oil
 Pita bread rounds—4 or 8 depending on how thick a crust you want.
 1 cup fresh basil leaves
 ½ cup balsamic vinegar

Directions:

Preheat oven to 400 degrees. Crumble the goat cheese. Drain and chop the roasted red peppers, and also drain the chopped sun-dried tomatoes. You can use the pita bread rounds “as is” or you can cut around the outside edge and separate into two halves for a thinner crust. Place onto a baking sheet and sprinkle each round with the first three ingredients. Bake the pizzas for 16 minutes in preheated oven, or until the crust is crisp. Immediately after they come out of the oven, sprinkle each with torn basil and drizzle with balsamic vinegar to taste. Serve hot or warm. They can be served as personal pizzas or cut into quarters for an appetizer.

MGR BREEDER SUSAN WALTERS

Several years ago my husband and I bought a small acreage just outside Victoria, B.C., Canada. It had always been my dream to have a hobby farm, but I never thought I'd be lucky enough to actually get one. Almost immediately after we moved in we acquired our first miniature horse and fell instantly in love with her and the whole miniature horse world. A short time later during one of his visits, my son mentioned something about fainting goats he'd seen on TV. My response was "what!" I'd never heard of such a thing, but it sure sounded interesting to me. Before long I was searching the internet looking for information on these intriguing creatures. In my search I came across a few websites referring to a new rare breed called Miniature Silky Fainting Goats. The fact that they were miniature was right up my alley and the more I found out about them, the more fascinated I became with these adorable looking little guys. Being the animal lover I am it didn't take long before I knew I had to have a couple. Along with this awareness came the realization that – oh yeah - I'm in Canada and they're in the United States – Virginia to be exact, quite a distance from me. I had purchased and transported miniature horses from the US previously so I assumed it had to be similar, didn't it? Well, I couldn't have been more wrong about that but after several months, import permits, a fair bit of expense and a lot of work from the breeder in the US, it all came together. I was so excited to get my 2 little bucks home nothing was going to deter me or dampen my spirits. I became the first breeder of Miniature Silkies in Canada.

This was my introduction to the goat world. Since then I've imported more and had great success in my breeding program. I strictly adhere to the Miniature Silky Goat Breed standard and am really happy with my decision to raise this type of goat. I absolutely adore them. It is a breed developed in the early 1990s by Renee Orr and Frank Baylis. They became enthralled with a registered Nigerian Dwarf buck that had a long coat and a head full of hair including thick bangs. They wanted a goat the size of their Nigerians but with a distinctive look of long haired fainters. Renee also used Nigerians to add more of a color mix to the breed. She began breeding a couple of her long haired fainters to Nigerian Dwarf does with long hair that she knew had fainters in their background and they immediately produced long hair and some first generation crosses fainted. Mini Silkies are intended to have lustrous, floor-length coats and eye concealing bangs - the Silky Terrier dog look. The Miniature Silky Fainting Association was founded in 2005. I am happy to be taking part in this awesome breed and look forward to its expansion into more parts of Canada.

tube. If you don't have an adult goat stomach tube and mouthpiece, make your own by following the directions in my article on how to do it on the Articles page at www.tennesseemeatgoats.com.

Dehydration and hypothermia (low-body temperature) are a real threat to newborn kids. A newborn kid comes into the world empty and vulnerable; immediate intake of colostrum is essential to its survival. If the kid does not get this life-starting liquid within about six hours (weather conditions may cause this timeframe to be shorter or longer), it will dehydrate quickly and die. To save a kid whose dam is either unwilling or unable to nurse it, you must supply colostrum from the dam or colostrum replacer. Weak, premature, and dehydrated newborns (kids with sub-normal body temperatures) must have easy-to-digest sugars (molasses/water or Karo syrup/water—not honey/water) administered orally and Lactated Ringers Solution (vet prescription) given subcutaneously. Do not put milk products in the stomach when body temperature is 100°F or lower because when the goat's body is trying to keep from dying, blood is diverted to essential organs like heart, lungs, liver, and kidneys, while blood flow to the stomach is reduced, making the stomach unable to digest its contents. Undigested food becomes toxic and the goat dies. Electrolytes (Bounce Back, ReSorb, Pedialyte, or even Gatorade) should be kept on hand for oral rehydration. If these products are not available or if you do not know how to administer them, then the kid needs immediate veterinary intervention to survive. In many cases, both oral and subcutaneous rehydration techniques are necessary to save a weak or dying kid. (This information is also applicable to sick adult goats.)

For kids, an example of needed fluids: a ten-pound kid needs 10% to 12% of its body weight in ounces over a 24-hour period. Ten pounds = 160 ounces; 10% to 12% of 160 ounces = 16 to 18 ounces of liquids (milk, water, or electrolytes—depending upon its rectal temperature).

It is difficult to get enough Lactated Ringers subcutaneously into an adult goat; stomach tubing (or IV infusion by a vet) is necessary. Stomach tubing an adult goat is easier than tubing a kid if you can get someone to restrain the goat or can secure the animal to a fence or post.

Stomach tube the sick adult goat two to four times over a 24 hour period until it begins eating and urinating. When stomach tubing a medium-sized-breed adult goat, begin with about a quart of liquids per tube feeding to keep from overwhelming the goat's digestive system.

Stomach tubing newborn and young kids can be more difficult than tubing adults because (a) they are often harder to hold without risking injury, (b) getting the kid stomach tube into the stomach and not the lungs may be difficult for the nervous beginner, and (c) it is easier to over-fill a kid's stomach and make the situation worse. However, with determination and practice, one person can do it if no one else is available. Read Stomach Tubing Sick Goats on the Articles page at: www.tennesseemeatgoats.com.

The first step in dealing with a sick or injured goat—kid or adult—is to take its rectal temperature. Then address the likely situation that the goat is dehydrated, as well as the need for antibiotics or other medical treatments. Remember that a goat can be very ill as the direct result of dehydration. It doesn't take much dehydration to knock the rumen off its proper pH and put the goat into a life-threatening condition.

The Myotonic Goat Registry was formed in 2005 as a sole ownership registry by Gene McNutt with input from an initial Board of Advisors made up of Dr. Phil Sponenberg and Barbara Roberts. The current Board of Advisors also includes Cindy Bene, Judy Balmer, Jan Likens and Dian Naumann. The owner and Board of Advisors will make decisions concerning the registry and its procedures. This method of governance is meant to provide Myotonic Goat breeders with a registry that will not have frequent changes, and will have the longevity and consistency needed to successfully promote the Myotonic Goat breed, while at the same time make it responsive to the needs and wishes of the breeders. In 2009, Gene retired and the registry was sold to Tara Lawrence. As the Myotonic Goat Registry grows, additional Board of Advisor members may be added in order to more broadly represent the breeders. The owner, along with the Board of Advisors, will be responsible for providing for its own replacements and/or expansions.

The Myotonic Goat Registry takes into consideration all breeders, from pet owners to commercial meat growers. Regardless of which aspect of this breed appeals to you, the Myotonic Goat Registry is the place for all breeders to register their Myotonic Goats.

The Registry will help breeders promote their goats through sales, shows, and advertising, and will educate the public about the Myotonic Goat and its usefulness in a variety of settings.
